'I just felt violated and exposed'

Online. Woman speaks out after her nude photos were posted on a gossip website without her consent

Anisa Salmi of Richmond is calling for tougher laws to protect women against cyberbullying . She says an ex-boyfriend posted nude photos of her on U.S. gossip website The Dirty. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

A Richmond woman is calling for tougher laws to protect women against cyberbullying after she says a bitter ex-boyfriend posted nude photos of her online.

Anisa Salmi, 27, said a friend texted her a month ago asking if she knew intimate images of her were featured on The Dirty, a notorious U.S. gossip website where people can post anonymously about others.

"I put my name into Google and it was the first name that came up," she told Metro. "I just felt violated and exposed. The photos were up there without my consent."

Salmi said she immediately knew who had posted the photos, as she had sent them only to her former partner.

The photos surfaced online about a month after they broke up, she said.

Also on the website were statements Salmi described as defamatory — that she works as an escort, has HIV and that she steals.

As a recent University of B.C. graduate, Salmi said she worried the photos would affect her chances of finding a job.

After unsuccessfully trying to track down her former partner to take down the photos, Salmi said she filed a complaint with Richmond RCMP but was shocked by the police response.

"The cop said there's nothing that can be done," she said. "He said because I gave the photos willingly, it was kind of my fault they ended up on the Internet."

While she couldn't comment on a specific investigation where charges weren't laid, Cpl. Stephanie Ashton of Richmond RCMP said there is little police can do unless there are elements of criminal harassment.

"In a case where someone has willingly transmitted nude photos of themselves, the elements of criminal harassment are not met," Ashton wrote in an email.

After a lengthy ordeal trying to get the photos removed, Salmi eventually paid $2,000 to an online reputation management company, The Dirty Defenders.

Although the images have now been removed, Salmi said she wanted to speak out to advocate for laws to protect others from sites like The Dirty.

Vancouver criminal defence lawyer Alexander Ejsmont said Canada is behind many other jurisdictions when it comes to criminalizing the distribution of privately obtained images of a sexual nature.

Ejsmont said he often gets calls from cyberbullying victims, but that it's difficult to advise them when the photos are hosted on servers in foreign countries.

"The Internet is a borderless domain," he said.

New legislation has been proposed in the House of Commons to amend voyeurism laws, he said.

If passed, Bill C-13 would make it a criminal offence to knowingly publish or distribute an intimate image of a person without their consent.

If a woman finds herself in a situation similar to Salmi's, Ejsmont suggested they find a civil lawyer familiar with privacy law or pay an online reputation management company to remove the post. But that could prove difficult for some who can't afford either option, he said. THANDI FLETCHER/METRO

Mayor talks transparency and campaign finances

Robertson. Vision mayor says he supports lobbyist registry, that party works on a 'level playing field'

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Whether they want to build condos or get the social licence for more oil tankers, you can bet people are vying to bend the ear of Vancouver's mayor.

Exactly who they are and what they want remains something of a mystery without a formal lobbyist registry, which has been called for by the Non-Partisan Association.

But Mayor Gregor Robertson — who has been accused of being in the pocket of developers — is willing to support an online registry for the city if he is re-elected on Nov. 15.

Robertson made the comments in a chat with Metro, the last in a week-long series of conversations with city leaders.

"I'm definitely supportive," Robertson said. He wants to see what a lobbyist registry looks like in practice, but added that it is the norm for provincial and national governments.

Responding to criticism about transparency, Robertson noted his government has created an open data catalogue and released councillor expenses.

"Beyond that, Vision has been calling for an end to corporate and union donations in political campaigns. We've been doing that for six years," Robertson said.

Despite the lobbying and support from the Union of B.C. Municipalities, the province did not legislate caps on spending or donations this year. Vancouver Green Party councillor Adriane Carr tried to pass a motion for Vancouver to establish its own limits, but Vision quashed it to wait for legislation.

"We've done all the accountability pieces that we're required to do by law and we play on a level playing field," Robertson said.

Even though Vision isn't hurting for cash, Robertson was quick to point out the "absurd" million-dollar donation the NPA received in 2011.

Tent cities reveal struggles of homeless in Lower Mainland

Metro Votes. Each week leading up to the Nov. 15 municipal elections, Metro explores the top issues facing the region. The first in our series focuses on homelessness

matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

The homeless camp at Oppenheimer Park in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside is slated to be removed by Oct. 15. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO FILE

The tale of two tent cities has put the spotlight back on homelessness ahead of this year's municipal elections.

Despite concerted efforts from cities and the provincial government recently to stem a crisis that peaked in the mid-2000s, homelessness continues to highlight the region's failure to address issues of poverty, affordable housing, mental health and addiction.

During the regional district's 2014 homelessness count, volunteers recorded 2,770 people without homes, an increase from the 2,650 counted in 2011.

Street homelessness (those not in shelters) increased in Vancouver and on the North Shore.

Homeless camps in Vancouver's Oppenheimer Park, where campers have protested the lack of affordable housing, and Abbotsford's Jubilee Park, where the homeless have been embroiled in a battle with the city over their right to shelter, have put the problem into laser focus.

"What you're hearing here is not just a housing issue, but a human issue," said DJ Larkin, the Pivot Legal Society lawyer who has represented both tent cities against legal challenges in each respective municipality.

"We see camps like the ones that are happening in Abbotsford and here in Vancouver because our federal government has failed us. We have no national housing plan. The provincial government has been creating less social housing since the '90s ... and the resources that they are now throwing at people is just barely enough to start get the ball rolling again."

Quoted

"You're going to see tent cities all across this country until the national and provincial governments do something." DJ Larkin, lawyer, Pivot Legal Society

Cities have been forced to pick up the slack.

Those unable, or unwilling, to provide enough outreach and housing options have instead resorted to bylaws and court injunctions to keep the problem out of sight, Larkin says.

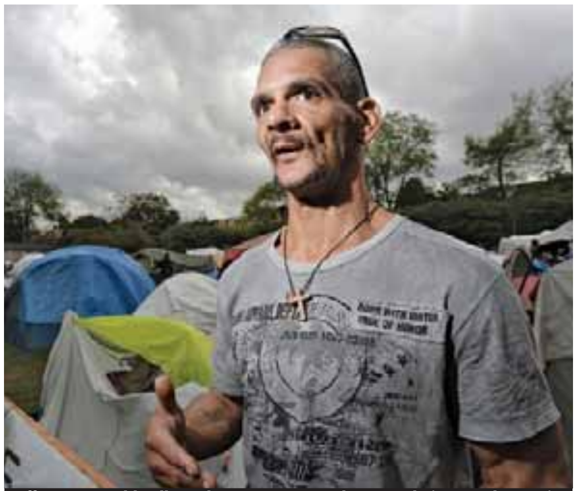
Pivot, representing the Association of Drug War Survivors, plans to go ahead with a constitutional challenge against Abbotsford's bylaws preventing people from being in parks overnight and erecting basic survival structures early next year.

"The answer isn't to make them go somewhere where we can't see them," she said.

In granting an injunction against the Oppenheimer camp Wednesday, B.C. Supreme Court Madame Justice Jennifer Duncan sympathized with those in the camp, saying their stories informed her decision to give the tent city a week to close, in the hope the City of Vancouver could find adequate housing for the people there.

Earlier in the hearings, she expressed that she was "gob-smacked" by the apparent disconnect between funding and the lack of coordination between service providers and government to find campers suitable housing.

Depending on what happens to the Oppenheimer campers when the injunction takes effect Oct. 15, homelessness could be an even more prominent issue come next month's election.



Jeffrey Dean Caldwell speaks to reporters at the Oppenheimer Park tent city on Sept. 25. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO FILE

A home to be proud of

Jeffrey Dean Caldwell dreams of a home he doesn't have to share with cockroaches, bed bugs and broken-down shared toilets.

It's conditions like those that have driven the Vancouver man to the tent city at Oppenheimer Park, where life is actually more civil, clean and dignified than in the Downtown Eastside's infamous, run-down single room occupancy (SRO) hotels.

"Because I'm homeless, for whatever the reason may be, I still have the right and dignity to be proud of where I live," he said Sept. 29. "We're not asking for anything that the average person doesn't want. A hotel with 40 SROs and two bathrooms — one that never works — is not sufficient. Would anybody be satisfied with that?"

He gravitated toward the camp in July because, at the time, there was nothing else. Overnight shelters, like the 100 spaces the city and province opened recently to accommodate campers, don't count.

"They're dangerous, the conditions are hard and the rules are really restrictive," Caldwell said. "I don't want a shelter, I want a home. The only affordable places in the DTES are SROs, why is that? If I can't find a place where I can get my social services, I'm homeless. There are no other neighbourhoods to go to."

A court-ordered injunction has put Caldwell and the other 100 to 200 homeless people at the camp in a tough situation, as they're forced to vacate Oppenheimer on Oct. 15, before much-needed social housing is available.

Advocates warn there is no guarantee the campers will be able access those units when they're online, while the city is hoping to first transition them into the same shelters they vehemently oppose.

MATT KIELTYKA/METRO

Time running out

Vision still struggling to live up to promise

Nowhere in the region is homelessness as big of an election issue as it is in Vancouver.

Since being elected with a mandate to end street homelessness by 2015, the city's incumbent mayor Gregor Robertson — now at the end of his second term — is still trying to convince voters his government is making progress in the face of contradicting evidence.

The 2014 Metro Vancouver homeless count identified street homelessness has nearly doubled: 538 compared to 273 in 2013.

Time to fulfill that promise is running out, but Robertson is standing firm.

"It is still possible," he told Metro on Thursday. "We've had over 500 people move from the street, through shelters, into housing over the last several years. It's worked for lots of people, we're continuing with that path. We've been opening up some more housing since that (homeless count), that's brought the number down, we think, a little bit since March."

Three buildings, with 259 units of housing, are slated to open in the next few months and the city has also commandeered a former hotel at 1335 Howe St. to house up to temporarily 157 people starting in November.

Vision's rival parties aren't impressed.

"In 2008, Gregor Robertson promised to end homelessness. After six years of corporate tax breaks, luxury condo development, and renovictions, homelessness is at its highest level in recorded history," argues an Oct. 8 statement from the Coalition of Progressive Electors.

Kids know when you're lying: Study

UBC. By the age of five, children are more likely to know whether they're being told the truth, researchers found

Many parents tell their children the occasional white lie, but a new study suggests that kids can tell when they're being misinformed, even when it's by a confident trickster.

Psychology researchers at the University of B.C. found that, by the age of five, children become wary of information provided by people who make overly confident claims.

"There's kind of this naïve belief that children are just passive sponges soaking up any and all new information," said Susan Birch, the study's senior author and an associate professor of psychology at UBC. "But … there's quite a bit of evidence that children play a very active role in deciding what to learn and who to believe."

For the study, researchers recruited 96 children aged four and five and had them watch short videos in which speakers made true statements about animals in a hesitant voice or false statements in a confident voice.

The researchers had the children weigh two cues to a person's credibility — prior accuracy and confidence — when deciding what to believe.

For the four-year-old group, the children were as likely to believe the confident liar as the hesitant truth-teller, but as the children neared the age of five, they were more likely to believe the previously accurate but hesitant speaker.

"It's neat that, in such a short period of time in development, it looks like children are learning more about how they've possibly been misled in the past," said Birch.

Birch said the study's findings are important for parents and teachers to help foster a child's critical thinking, especially in an information age.

"Parents can help foster these skills by reminding kids that they shouldn't believe everything they hear or read," said Birch. THANDI FLETCHER/METRO

Party down. City's NYE party cancelled for 2015

The flicker of hope for a city-sanctioned New Year's Eve street party has officially fizzled.

Organizers have cancelled the free celebration planned for Jack Poole Plaza on Dec. 31, 2014 after failing to attract enough sponsorship to host the event complete with music, food trucks and fireworks.

It was to be the city's first New Year's Eve party in more than two decades, an idea that created buzz when announced with fanfare at a news conference with Mayor Gregor Robertson in December 2013.

But organizers pulled the plug after only getting $200,000 of the $300,000 needed by their Oct. 1 deadline, said Charles Gauthier, chair of the Vancouver New Year's Eve Celebration Society.

"We just felt if we don't do it well, it will be much more challenging in terms of attracting corporate sponsorship in ensuing years," Gauthier said, pointing to the online renderings picturing a slick, well-executed event.

Even if a sponsor steps in last minute, they won't hold an event this year because it's too late to attract the best musical acts and organize resources with the city. But Gauthier remains optimistic that the party could go forward a year later on Dec. 31, 2015. EMILY JACKSON/METRO

Province chided for not following recommendations

British Columbia's representative for children says the Liberal government has ignored most of her major reform recommendations, including action plans on child poverty, domestic violence and aboriginal children.

Mary Ellen Turpel-Lafond estimates the budget for the Ministry of Children and Family Development has been cut by almost $100 million over six years and she says that has hurt program development. She tabled a report today that looks over the progress by government for recommendations made by her office up until 2013.

B.C. girl banned from wearing headscarves

School policy. Rules must be followed, says principal

They're pretty and they serve a practical purpose: keeping her bangs out of her eyes.

But officials at Jaime Mitchell's school have told her that if she keeps coming to her Grade 3 class wearing a scarf, "she will no longer be welcome," said her mother, Erin.

The eight-year-old said she's worn hairbands in the past to deal with her long hair, but finds the scarves work better.

Alain Blais, principal at Lloyd George elementary school in Kamloops, where Jaime has attended since kindergarten has told the family the scarves violate the school's dress code.

Blais acknowledged he had told Erin Mitchell that her daughter would be allowed to wear a scarf for religious reasons, referring her to the district's policy that says schools, when developing codes or policies, must address "the wearing of hats, hoodies or other headwear, other than for religious reasons."

The principal, new to the school after moving from Alberta, said his position comes from his belief that rules are rules, and it is respectful to remove hats or headwear when entering a building and that the policy avoids a double standard.

"At some point, there's no point arguing. I don't understand the purpose of not following the rules," Blais said, adding that the restriction is needed to deal with students who wear tuques or hoodies, zipped up "so they hide their faces and the teacher can't see if the students are learning.

"I feel one of the things we are doing is preparing students to be in a workforce and you don't wear headgear in the workforce," he said, noting the policy is also designed to address the wearing of gang colours.

Mitchell said her daughter wore scarves while in preschool in Vancouver so her Muslim friend, who also wore a scarf, wouldn't feel out of place. She sees it as her daughter's right to express herself.

Multicultural schools in Israel focus on building a better future for all

Initiative. Hand in Hand co-founder Lee Gordon is working to promote peace through diversity in the classroom

Influencing young minds

> “Fear, anger and violence are undermining shared living. But this is not the case at Hand in Hand. Our preschools, summer programs and community activity continue unabated in our five schools and communities. As we begin the 2014-15 school year, and as our network of bilingual schools and communities expands, so does our message to Israeli society: There is another way.”
> Hand In Hand, handinhandk12.org

With five schools and 1,200 students across Israel, educational organization Hand in Hand has one ambition — to foster peaceful multiculturalism in Israeli society, starting with kids in kindergarten.

“The goal of Hand in Hand is to create a viable model for shared living in Israeli society,” says Lee Gordon, executive director for the American Friends of Hand in Hand. He was in Toronto at the beginning of October to drum up funding for the organization.

“Twenty per cent of Israeli citizens are also Palestinian Arabs,” says Gordon. “There’s a big divide between Jews and Arabs inside of Israel. It’s a segregated society — partly because of the conflict, partly because of language, and partly because there is an Arab public school system and a Jewish public school system.”

Gordon, whose background is in social work and educational leadership, lived and worked in Israel for more than 20 years. He saw that the segregated way of life — specifically, the segregated school system — was a serious impediment to building a trusting, collaborative society in Israel. That’s what inspired him to co-found Hand in Hand with an Arab colleague, Amin Khalaf, in 1997.

“We decided one way we could really make an impact would be to create a new model of schooling, in which Jewish and Arab children go to school together on a daily basis, year after year,” he says. “If you disagree and don’t have any common ground, it’s hard to solve conflict. If you disagree but have the common ground of attending school together, becoming friends, writing the same exams, you have a human bond.” That, he says, makes resolving conflict easier.

The concept was sound, but actually making it happen took months of research and planning. The first schools didn’t open until the fall of 1998.

“We started with 50 children in two locations,” he says, “a kindergarten class in Jerusalem and a first-grade class in Northern Israel.”

Each class is split down the middle: half of the students are Jewish Israeli, the other half, Arab Israeli. There are two teachers, and the instructional time is also split. Students learn half of their lessons in Hebrew and half in Arabic. Since 1998, the organization has grown significantly, with 1,200 students now spread among five schools across Israel. The first class graduated from high school in 2011.

At Hand in Hand schools, the learning opportunities aren’t restricted to students in classrooms. In an effort to encourage the atmosphere of collaboration, parents are encouraged to attend school programs and cultural celebrations.

It’s all part of the larger goal, says Gordon.

“We want to be a social phenomenon in Israel,” he says.

“You can have a diplomatic solution, but unless you have a grassroots, people-to-people partnership as the foundation, peace won’t stand. We’re part of that grassroots effort.”

Legalize it, says CAMH. Feds say, not in the plans

Pot debate. Liberals, NDP applaud position from Canada's largest mental health research centre; Feds say they'll 'increase enforcement'

The Harper government's resolve to enforce laws against marijuana is unshaken by a call to legalize pot from the country's largest mental health and addiction treatment centre.

Justice Minister Peter MacKay said Thursday the Conservative government has no intention of heeding the call of the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health.

Indeed, the government remains committed to going in the opposite direction, said MacKay: finding ways to actually increase enforcement of marijuana laws, including potentially making it a ticketing offence to possess small quantities of dope.

But Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau, who has been championing legalization for more than a year, said CAMH's endorsement of the idea shows he's on the right track while the Tories are ideologically bound to a war on drugs that has proven a total failure.

NDP health critic Libby Davies, whose party supports decriminalization of marijuana, said the Conservatives are becoming increasingly isolated on the issue as more and more public health groups refuse to back their tough-on-pot message.

In a policy statement released Thursday, CAMH said cannabis should be legalized and strictly regulated, sold through a government-controlled monopoly with limited availability and an age limit. The centre concluded that the current legal prohibition on pot has failed to prevent use or reduce the harm it can cause.

That pretty much echoes the arguments that have been made by Trudeau, who has been pilloried by Conservatives for allegedly wanting to make pot more easily available to children.

"Yes, it's nice to see a world-class organization like CAMH come out and agree with (us) and demonstrate that we're on the right track," Trudeau said in an interview.

By contrast, he said CAMH's position shows the Harper government is "trapped in policies based on ideology rather than policies based on evidence and that is harmful to Canadians and to Canada." THE CANADIAN PRESS

The people want to name that bridge — for $20

Some Saskatoon residents set up their own contest to name a new bridge after a city report said it would need $30,000 to do it.

The group behind the OurYXE podcast launched the site www.namethatbridge.ca, where Saskatoon residents can submit ideas for the Circle Drive South bridge.

The group said in a release Wednesday that it took 10 minutes and $20 to launch the website.

Submissions will be accepted during the nomination phase of the project.

Residents will then be able to vote for their favourite nominations.

Final results will be forwarded to the city and city council.

The group said it's looking forward to reviewing ideas from the public and encourage everyone to submit a name.

Not guilty. Mountie who watched female inmates have sex in jail acquitted

A Mountie who watched two female inmates have sex in a jail cell in Kamloops, B.C., has been found not guilty of breach of trust by a public officer, but it will likely be months before he learns if he can return to work.

Cpl. Rick Brown was the watch commander on duty in August 2010 when he and other RCMP officers and at least one jail guard viewed the women's sex acts on a closed-circuit monitor.

The Crown argued at trial that Brown should have intervened, but seemed to consider the entire situation entertaining and invited others to watch.

Brown's lawyer told the trial there were no guidelines in place at the time governing what should be done in such situations.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Selwyn Romilly ruled Thursday that Brown was not out of line in watching the women have sex and prisoners should not expect privacy while behind bars.

Romilly called the case "one of the most bizarre" he'd seen as a judge and was skeptical about whether it should have proceeded even before the trial began last month.

Outside court, defence lawyer Glen Orris said he expected the not-guilty verdict.

"Ever since I've had this file, I've strongly believed there wasn't an offence here," Orris said. "This matter should not have been dealt with criminally."

Orris said Brown plans to go back to work with the RCMP, having spent more than four years on paid administrative leave pending the outcome of his trial.

"He's an extremely good police officer," said Orris. "I like to think this hasn't done anything to his career. We'll have to wait and see what the RCMP does. I hope what they do is welcome him back to work."

Brown said he's still digesting the decision.

"I'll probably just take the weekend to unwind," he said. "It's been a long time — four years." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Harassment in Winnipeg creeps out Inuk singer

A prize-winning throat singer says she was sexually harassed and called "a sexy little Indian" while in the Manitoba capital recently.

Tanya Tagaq was in the city performing with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet in Going Home Star — Truth and Reconciliation, a production about the legacy of Indian residential schools.

Tagaq said on her Twitter account that she was walking to lunch when a man started following.

"I was in Winnipeg for the ballet, walking to lunch, when a man started following me calling me a 'sexy little Indian,'" Tagaq said on her Twitter account, adding that he crudely propositioned her. "It's disgusting. I'm sick of it."

Using the hashtag MMIW for missing and murdered indigenous women, Tagaq said the harassment was "creepy and scary."

"It happens when we are alone," she wrote. "In the day or night."

Tagaq's record label, Six Shooter Records, said the Inuk singer wasn't available to comment Thursday.

The encounter resonates in Winnipeg where many are still upset and angry over the killing of 15-year-old Tina Fontaine, whose body was pulled from the Red River in August. Her death, which has been ruled a homicide, sparked renewed calls for a national inquiry into almost 1,200 missing and murdered aboriginal women.

Polaris Prize winner Tanya Tagaq
CONTRIBUTED/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has dismissed the calls and has said Fontaine's death was a crime and not a sociological phenomenon.

Tagaq has talked openly about the fear among aboriginal women and that her daughters are four times more likely to be murdered than a non-aboriginal woman.

The Inuk singer recently won the Polaris Music Prize after a performance that featured the names of some of Canada's 1,200 missing and murdered aboriginal women. The award is given annually to the best full-length Canadian album based on artistic merit.

She later lamented her statement was overshadowed by her speech in which she took aim at animal welfare group PETA for opposing the Inuit seal hunt.

"I had a scrolling screen of 1,200 missing and murdered indigenous women at the Polaris gala, but people are losing their minds over seals," she tweeted last month following the award ceremony.

Her most recent tweets about being harassed in Winnipeg have prompted an outpouring of anger, sympathy and support.

"Good for you for posting about this — people need to wake and treat these incidents seriously," tweeted Julie Lamoureux. "I'm sorry this happened to you."

Magnotta trial. Autopsy was difficult to perform, says forensic pathologist

The jury in Luka Rocco Magnotta's first-degree murder trial has begun hearing the testimony of the forensic pathologist who performed the autopsy on the remains of Chinese student Jun Lin.

Yann Daze says the task was difficult given the body was dismembered and the autopsy had to be conducted over five non-consecutive days.

Daze testified that police initially found most of the body in advanced decomposition in the trash behind Magnotta's Montreal apartment building but that the head, feet and hands were missing.

The pathologist also examined tools found in the trash believed to have been used in the slaying, including a knife, a screwdriver, a hammer, a small electric saw and scissors.

The 32-year-old Magnotta has pleaded not guilty to five charges in Lin's slaying in late May 2012, as well as publishing a so-called murder video online.

Daze says he didn't view the video because he knew it was connected to the case and he didn't want to taint his own findings.

He testified Thursday he didn't have any interest in watching the video in any case.

"Frankly, I see enough disgusting things in my line of work, I didn't need to see any more," he told the jury.

Daze explained that conducting an autopsy over five separate days was difficult because pathologists usually do them over consecutive days and know what they are looking for from the start.

When he began the task on June 1, 2012, Daze said he had the majority of the body. Police had found a torso, cut at the neck, shoulders and thighs in a suitcase, as well as arms and legs in the trash.

Daze said the torso was facing upward and was covered in maggots.

He said he also found a piece of paper underneath the torso but fluids coming from the sectioned body part made the note illegible.

The jury has heard previously that Lin's hands and feet would turn up in Ottawa and Vancouver while the head was recovered a month later at a Montreal park.

Marines arrive at the centre of Ebola crisis

SOS. The ‘world is not responding fast enough’ to the Ebola crisis says Sierra Leone’s president; children are orphaned

Six U.S. military planes arrived Thursday at the epicentre of the Ebola crisis, carrying more aid and American Marines into Liberia, the country hardest hit by the deadly disease that has devastated West Africa and stirred anxiety across a fearful world.

At a World Bank meeting in Washington, the presidents of several West African countries struggling with Ebola pleaded for help, with one calling the epidemic “a tragedy unforeseen in modern times.”

PBO says Canadians will pay $4.5B more than needed in EI premiums

Ottawa's surplus plans. Budget watchdog also says that reducing EI premiums for small businesses will have negative consequences

Finance Minister Joe Oliver ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The federal government's handling of employment insurance will reduce job creation by 9,000 jobs over the next two years and compel Canadians to pay $4.5 billion more in EI premiums than needed, the parliamentary budget officer (PBO) says.

In an analysis of Finance Minister Joe Oliver's recent decision to freeze EI premiums at a rate higher than needed for the EI account to break even, the PBO says the move will contribute significant extra revenues to Ottawa's plan to run budget surpluses in the next few years.

After years of budget deficits, Oliver will be in a position to record budget surpluses starting next year.

Instead of using extra EI revenues to balance the federal government's books, Ottawa could use the funds to make EI payments available to a higher proportion of jobless Canadians, the PBO says.

Because of the increase in part-time jobs that don't qualify for EI and an increase the number of long-term unemployed, only 38 per cent of unemployed workers are receiving EI payments, the report notes.

The study also takes aim at Oliver's recent decision to reduce EI premiums for small businesses, which will cost Ottawa $550 million over two years.

The PBO estimates this move will add only 800 net new jobs in the economy between now and 2016, which means the jobs are being created at an average cost of $550,000 per person-year. This is a sharp contrast to Oliver's prediction of the impact of the EI cuts for small business. He cited a report saying the move would produce thousands of new jobs during the next few years.

The PBO said the impact on job creation or job losses of current federal EI policies will even out over the long term because of the government's commitment to adjust EI premium rates after 2016 so that the EI fund will operate on a break-even basis. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Small businesses

The PBO also says the new jobs resulting from the small business EI reduction will be more than offset by the impact of keeping overall EI premium rates higher than needed for the EI account to break even. This approach will reduce the ranks of the employed by 10,000 over the next two years, the analysis said.

Pop go the Pepsi, Coke sales in Mexico

Going flat? A new tax in Mexico has hit the top pop companies

No wonder Coke and Pepsi are spending millions of dollars to fight proposed taxes on sugary drinks in California.

PepsiCo reported a higher quarterly profit Thursday as global sales rose, but one weak spot was Mexico. The company said snack sales volume declined by three per cent, hurt by a new tax on junk foods.

Recent declines suffered by Pepsi and Coke in Mexico underscore why the beverage industry is fighting tax proposals on sugary drinks in San Francisco and nearby Berkeley, Calif.

PepsiCo — which makes Frito-Lay chips, Gatorade and Tropicana — reported similar declines in its snack business for the first half of the year, starting when the tax went into effect.

Coca-Cola, which reports its third quarter results Oct. 21, has also reported beverage volume declines in Mexico for the first half of the year, citing a similar tax on drinks. Mexico has the world's highest per capita consumption of Coca-Cola drinks.

Hugh Johnston, chief financial officer for PepsiCo, said in a phone interview that declines in Mexico were in line with what the company expected. To mitigate the impact of the tax, he said PepsiCo plans to target different package sizes for different outlets. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DR. DEATH, NICKELBACK & TOMMY THE CHIMP

THE METRO LIST
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

On the eve of the Thanksgiving long weekend, we're here to give thanks for the Metro List, your guide to the newsiest news of the week.

1 Tried, Tested and True. Sounds better than "ineffective and out of date." We're talking about the six CF18s that Ottawa is sending to the Middle East to help stamp out the latest terrorist threat. The first CF18 Hornet was delivered in 1982, so this is the defence equivalent of sending a 32-year-old Oldsmobile to war. One last assignment on the way to the recycling depot.

2 The Last Trip to The Vet. A poll released this week shows that 84 per cent of Canadians favour physician-assisted suicide, as an alternative to a slow, painful "natural" date with Dr. Death. It sounds good on paper, but this is Canada, where you have to wait up to two years to have a hip replaced. The chances of expiring before you get an appointment are too real.

3 Mea Culpa. Speaking of real, Pope Francis is encouraging his cardinals and theologians to get real and figure out what to do about the millions of Catholics who ignore the Church's rules on birth control, sex outside of marriage, divorce, and all that stuff you go to confession for. They can't just mass-excommunicate them, or there would be no one left in the pews on Sundays.

4 The Good Old Hockey Game, and Then Some. The puck dropped on the NHL regular season this week and millions of fans said goodbye to their families and descended into the "media room", not scheduled to emerge until June. This year, Rogers brings the full weight of its media empire to the table, with plans to broadcast 553 regular season games plus all the playoffs. We're talking all hockey, all the time. Imagine what happens if more than one Canadian team makes the playoffs; imagine a Canadian team competing in the Stanley Cup final; imagine two Canadian teams… it's easy if you try.

5 Will It Work on Justin Bieber, too? Some guy in London, England is trying to put together a crowd-funding campaign to keep Nickelback away from the UK capital. By going to #Donletnickelback and pledging between $1 and $50, fans of actual music can keep London Nickelback-free. $50, for example will get the guy to send Chad Kroeger an MP3 of his own music. "This way, the band will hear their own music, and likely retire immediately, thereby ensuring the success of our campaign," the website reads. Undeterred, Nickelback releases its eighth studio album in November.

6 Thanks, But No Thanks. In an Albany, N.Y., trailer park, Tommy the chimp, a 26-year-old veteran of the entertainment biz, watches TV and waits to find out of a court will grant him human rights. Ultimately, that will give him the right to go live with other chimps in a Florida wildlife sanctuary. While Tommy might prefer Florida to an upstate New York winter, does he have to change species to do it?

The Judge is a guilty pleasure

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

metro AR Scan this photo using your Metro News app to see a clip of Robert Downey Jr. swagger around as a criminal defence lawyer in The Judge. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Robert Downey Jr. is Hank Palmer, a hotshot defence lawyer who's been estranged from his father Judge Joseph Palmer (Robert Duvall) for years but is forced to see him when his mother passes away. Returning to his hometown of Carlinville, Ind., for the funeral, Hank must confront the life he left behind — ex-girlfriend Samantha (Vera Farmiga), brothers Glen (Vincent D'Onofrio) and Dale (Jeremy Strong) and his cold-fish father. The quick in-and-out trip is extended, however, when the judge is accused of murder and Hank becomes his lawyer.

- Richard: ●●●○○
- Mark: ●●●●○

Old-fashioned drama. Robert Downey Jr. heads up an impressive cast that delivers a solid, if not too original, film

Richard: Mark, The Judge feels like Oscar bait. It's a long movie with a wide story arc that gives its leads ample opportunity to strut their stuff. Downey hands in a solid, if somewhat familiar, performance while Duvall plays elder statesman, resurrecting the alpha male feel of The Great Santini. Both are used to good effect and the supporting cast keeps things humming along despite a story that pushes credulity to the limit. What's your verdict? Were you won over by the performances despite plot holes so big not even Iron Man could fill them?

Mark: Richard, The Judge is a sprawling, square, old-fashioned movie and I loved it in spite of itself. It's a pleasure to watch Downey act without a fifth of a billion bucks in CGI helping him out. The movie reminds us why we fell in love with him so long ago. His perfect wiseass line readings and adolescent smirk hide the softie underneath, and it's great to watch the transition slowly unfold. As for Duvall, how can you go wrong? He's not just an actor now, he's everyone's granddad. The acting in the movie is pretty flawless, and I'm including Vincent D'Onofrio and Vera Farmiga here as well.

RC: The acting is very good. It's the story, or should I say stories, that bogged me down. It's the hardest working movie in show business. It's a film that wants to check all the boxes. It's a family drama! No! It's a romance! Nope! It's a courtroom thriller! It's all those things, and, for me, less because it spreads the focus too thin by trying just a little too hard. Downey and Co. float above it all, however, touching down now and again to introduce a new plot twist and deliver the occasional touching moment.

MB: You're right; it's all those things. And one more: It's a John Mellencamp song. You see, he was born in a small town ... Richard, let's not forget the cliché of the big city slicker who finds out his roots are where his heart belongs. In spite of that, in spite of everything you so correctly enumerate, I still loved the movie. And although I had a pretty good idea how the thriller part was going to turn out, I was engaged to see how it would get there.

RC: Most of the silly stuff that bothered me comes in the form of clues Hank pieces together while forming the judge's defence and the trial itself. There will be no spoilers here, but suffice it to say the whole thing hinges on a bit of information so implausible that it gives new meaning to the term suspension of disbelief. Trouble is, it didn't have to be that way. There were any number of ways to establish the point in question (OK, here's a mild spoiler alert: It involves chemotherapy and a cottage) without trying so hard, but that's not the kind of film this is.

MB: But it is the kind of movie where the prosecuting attorney (Billy Bob Thornton) is given a Snidely Whiplash moustache just to make sure we all know he's the bad guy. Doesn't matter. Still loved the movie.

The film that Renner just 'had to make'

Kill the Messenger. Actor brings to life true story of journalist who alleged a link between the CIA and crack cocaine in L.A.

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

Jeremy Renner didn't know why Kill the Messenger had to be a movie until he was halfway through it. It tells of Gary Webb, a journalist at the tiny San Jose Mercury News who broke a story alleging a link between the CIA and the sudden appearance of crack cocaine in parts of Los Angeles. What finally got Renner on board was the aftermath, when Webb was hounded for his piece to the point where his career was destroyed. In 2004 Webb was found dead of an apparent suicide.

"It was a movie I wanted to do," Renner recalls. "Then it was a movie I had to do."

Still, he found his take on the film evolving as production of the film, his first as a producer, went on. "Before it was about Gary Webb and his plight. I love the David and Goliath story, the everyman in extraordinary circumstances," he says. "Ultimately it became a commentary on where we are today. I wouldn't have known two years ago when we were doing this that whistle-blowing would be such a popular topic right now."

But it was more than that. It also touched on newspapers. "Good journalism is not popular. People don't care about good writing and good investigative reporting. They care about nude celebrity leaked photos. And that's sad," he says. "You can't blame the media, even though I do. They do exacerbate the fire that's already started. But it's people who want to see this stuff."

Playing a journalist meant he had to learn about it. "That was a new thing for me to think about, being on that side of it, rather than having hatred towards it," he says. Indeed, Renner has been hounded by a number of rumours about his personal life, which he tirelessly insists are erroneous. He consulted with Kill the Messenger screenwriter Peter Landesman and his The Hurt Locker author Mark Boal, both former investigative reporters. But he was also concerned with how journalism would look onscreen.

Jeremy Renner stars in Kill the Messenger, which opens today. CONTRIBUTED

Quoted

"Good journalism is not popular. People don't care about good writing and good investigative reporting. They care about nude celebrity leaked photos."
Jeremy Renner

"No one wants to see Gary Webb researching. That's just not fun," Renner explains. "So we had him talk about his research with his editor."

Acting can be a form of journalism, especially if you're playing a real person. He says he didn't meet with Webb's family until he had done his own research into Webb as a person.

"He was tenacious and self-righteous and stubborn. Those are attributes but they're also flaws," he says. "That's what I love about Gary Webb: He's unapologetically flawed, and that's what makes him heroic. He accepted all those things about himself."

Without that drive, Renner says, Webb might never have pushed to get these allegations out in the open.

Kill the Messenger exists chiefly because Renner's name is familiar to the globe's moviegoers; in fact, he read the script while shooting Marvel's The Avengers.

Renner has that series, plus Mission: Impossible and the Bourne series (though Matt Damon has since reclaimed his role in the franchise).

"Doing Avengers movies lets me do Kill the Messenger," he explains. "We do those, then we get to make this movie that no one seemingly wants to make, because it's not easy. No one's throwing money at Kill the Messenger."

It's easy to forget — in part because the movie was forgotten almost as soon as it was released — but Renner got his start in no less than 1995's National Lampoon's Senior Trip, in which he played one of the misbehaving, slacker teens.

"That was my first job ever as an actor on film," he says. "I don't like to bash something that meant so much to me at the time. It's a crap movie, but it was a huge thing for me. It gave me a lot of confidence."

It also introduced him to costar Tommy Chong. Asked what he's like, he says, "Pretty much what you'd think. I remember some guitar streaming from his trailer, as well as some smoke."

It wasn't, he recalls, herbal.

The Boxtrolls

Director. Graham Annable , Anthony Stacchi

Stars. Ben Kingsley

The Boxtrolls are a community of quirky, mischievous creatures who have raised an orphaned human boy named Eggs (voiced by Isaac Hempstead-Wright) in the amazing cavernous home they've built beneath the streets of Cheesebridge. Allan Hawco as private eye Jake Doyle in the CBC TV series Republic of Doyle. CBC

Caught. Republic of Doyle star escapes to new series

After six years of playing private investigator Jake Doyle on Republic of Doyle, Allan Hawco has announced his next step: Playing a fugitive in a new CBC series.

The Newfoundland-born actor has announced he will produce and star in Caught, a drama based on Canadian author Lisa Moore's bestselling novel.

Hawco's production company Take the Shot Productions is teaming up with eOne to produce the series for CBC.

He will play David Slaney, a convicted drug-runner who escapes from a Nova Scotia prison after five years of incarceration.

Set in 1978, the series will follow his cross-country journey to reconnect with his former partner in crime and pull off one more job that would set them up for life.

Moore's novel was inspired by real events and was shortlisted for the Scotiabank Giller Prize in 2013.

Hawco, 37, said Caught represents an opportunity to continue his company's special relationship with CBC.

The sixth and final season of Republic of Doyle premieres Oct. 15 on CBC.

Netflix challenger

Amazon renews Transparent

Amazon has ordered a second season of its original series Transparent, as the online retail giant looks to mount a serious challenge to streaming pioneer Netflix.

Transparent is a dark comedy about a man (played by Jeffrey Tambor) who has transitioned to become a woman and is working out the thorny details of telling his family.

The series — which has generated serious industry buzz — is the creation of Jill Soloway, a writer on cult series Six Feet Under. The first season was released on Sept. 26.

Amazon has recently bolstered its streaming video offerings. But so far, its own original content has not reached the level achieved by Netflix. AFP

Crossover star

Scarlett Johansson comes to TV

Scarlett Johansson AFP

The latest Hollywood star to make the crossover from film to TV is Scarlett Johansson.

According to Deadline, the actress will co-executive produce and star in a limited series adapted from the Edith Wharton novel The Custom of the Country. Johansson will play the heroine, who is willing to risk everything to climb the ladder of New York's high society. Aimed at cable networks, the eight-episode program is penned by screenwriter Christopher Hampton (Dangerous Liaisons, Atonement, Adore). AFP

Memoir of having

As You Wish. Cary Elwes tweasures his wuv of playing Westley with tales from the making of The Princess Bride

LISA WEIDENFELD
Metro in Boston

For a certain subset of the population, the phrase "as you wish" has some pretty magical connotations. It's the coded phrase Westley says to Buttercup throughout The Princess Bride that she eventually comes to realize is his way of telling her he loves her.

It's also the title of a new memoir by Cary Elwes, who played Westley in the film, about the making of the film (the full title is As You Wish: Inconceivable Tales from the Making of the Princess Bride).

It's not just Elwes' memories making up the book, though. There are interviews throughout with almost everyone involved in making the movie, from screenwriter William Goldman to director Rob Reiner to Buttercup herself (and current House of Cards star), Robin Wright.

"I can't take complete credit for this book," admits Elwes. "I did get the rest of the cast to share their experiences."

The book is full of odd little stories about the making of the movie, like the time Elwes broke his toe trying to drive Andre the Giant's four-wheeler, and then, concerned he'd make director Rob Reiner so angry he'd be recast, continued trying to film.

The injury was something of a serious concern. He and Mandy Patinkin spent months learning how to fence, because Goldman had helpfully included in the script directions that the Westley/Inigo Montoya battle should be the "greatest swordfight in modern times."

Whether it was or not is, of course, up to the viewer, but Patinkin's interview about filming the big scene reminded Elwes of something he'd forgotten.

"Mandy reminded me that we had to change some of the fight sequence at the last second because it didn't work for the camera angle that Rob had chosen," says Elwes.

Reiner gave them something like 20 minutes to fix it (the battle they'd rehearsed for three months) and "we went and re-choreographed a whole section on the stairs, and got it and did it right in the first take, which I'd forgotten about," says Elwes.

The love the whole cast and crew had for the process is evident throughout the book.

Like being at 'theatre camp'

> "(Director Rob Reiner) set the tone by being so fun, so nurturing, and being an actor himself."

Cary Elwes describes how much the cast and crew enjoyed making The Princess Bride.

Elwes says the experience felt almost like "theatre camp," a mood set by Reiner himself. "He set the tone by being so fun, so nurturing, and being an actor himself," says Elwes.

Elwes says he was inspired to put the book together after the cast reunited for the 25th anniversary at the Lincoln Center, which didn't give him quite enough time to share the full experience of working on the film, but was a reminder of how much fan interest there is in any hint of trivia about it.

"We all get asked, every one of us, by fans, what it was like all the time," Elwes admits.

"I thought now is a good time before my memory starts to fail to try and jot it all down and share it with the fans."

Missing Andre the Giant

- One person who gets a lot of screen time, so to speak, in the book, is Andre Roussimoff, better known by his wrestling name, Andre the Giant.
- From his willingness to patiently take pictures with every single cast and crew member to his cheerful habit of calling everyone simply "Boss," he comes across as a person who responded to an unusual life with uncommon grace.
- Asked why he devoted so much space to the man, Elwes responds quite simply.
- "Because I missed him. We all do. If you were fortunate enough to have Andre in your life, as we all were, to say he looms large is an understatement. He was very much a part of our lives."

3rdEyeGirl. Playing with Prince means just jumping in

Donna Grantis grew up in the bustling suburb of Mississauga, Ont., and polished her considerable guitar chops at McGill University — but now she has two feet firmly planted on Planet Prince.

She remembers the first time she was reeled into the pop icon's orbit: She received an email asking if she wanted to come to Prince's famed Minnesota studio Paisley Park to jam. A phone call soon followed with a short list of songs to learn.

Naturally, she was skeptical. But then a ticket arrived for a one-way flight.

Her good fortune didn't necessarily become easier to believe upon arrival; if anything, the sense of surreal fantasy was only heightened when the chameleonic pop star walked into the room, introduced himself, and they started playing.

Anything can happen when you're playing with Prince

> "We could start off with a set list but I don't think we've ever played a gig where we've followed it."
> 3rdEyeGirl guitarist Donna Grantis

It's been nearly two years now since Grantis was made a member of both Prince's backing band and the all-female trio he masterminded, 3rdEyeGirl.

But no one really gets used to playing with Prince.

"Every time we play a song, anything can happen at any time," Grantis relayed in a recent telephone interview. "Prince is a master bandleader, so we've learned to really follow him.

Last week, the Purple One spearheaded the release of two albums: Art Official Age, a solo disc from the multi-instrumental master; and Plectrumelectrum, a groove-heavy record performed by 3rdEyeGirl, but written and produced by Prince.

Grantis caught up with The Canadian Press to discuss the records and help to settle some of the myths surrounding her legendary leader.

You're entered into a guitar-solo sparring match with Prince at the end of the new tune Anotherlove on Plectrumelectrum. What was that like?
It was like four in the morning one night when we played the track all together. And I was playing the rhythm-guitar part and I knew at the end that that whole long jam-out section was going to be a massive, epic solo. And Prince asked me if I wanted to record the solo right there on the spot or the next day. And I thought, "OK, I'd like to record this tomorrow because I thought it'll give me some time to come up with some soloing concepts, try out some different ideas, maybe work out a few things." And he said: "OK. Let's do it now."

I want to fact-check some of the rumours I've heard about working with Prince. I've read about 12-hour jam sessions. I guess you don't get a ton of sleep working with Prince?
No, you don't. Sleep's overrated.

And I heard he sends the band funny, short emails?
We totally pass on messages by email. Yeah, he's got a great sense of humour.

You're joined in 3rdEyeGirl by Hannah Ford and Ida Nielsen. It's not the first time he's assembled an all-female group. What do you think motivates him to do that?
I think he likes the energy we bring to the table. I've heard him say that he admires the strength in working with women. And I think it's just so cool to have a balance of male and female energy in a band — and in anything for that matter.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Bustin' ghosts with SNL stars, Parks & Rec or Feig faves?

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

It's really happening. Bridesmaids director Paul Feig confirmed on Twitter that he'll be directing a new Ghostbusters film with a female cast, co-written by Parks and Recreation scribe Katie Dippold.

Ever since the idea of an all-female Ghostbusters team was first floated earlier this summer, speculation has run rampant about who might fill out the roster. And who am I to stop something from running rampant?

Here are some ideas I think would be awesome.

The Feig all-stars: Melissa McCarthy, Kristen Wiig, Sandra Bullock and Rose Byrne.

McCarthy and Wiig seem like obvious choices — so obvious, in fact, that Bill Murray already name-checked them as what he'd like to see, along with Linda Cardellini and Emma Stone. (Hey, that's not a bad lineup either.)

But I'd round it out with McCarthy's Heat co-star, Bullock, and the Bridesmaids secret weapon, Byrne, who stole the show in Neighbors earlier this year.

The Parks & Rec Crew: Amy Poehler, Rashida Jones, Aubrey Plaza and Retta.

Given that Dippold is co-writing, it makes sense to look to Parks and Recreation for women to strap on the proton packs, and that show has a deep bench of female talent. We already know these four can play awkward co-workers, so why not throw some supernatural elements at them?

The SNL lineup: Kate McKinnon, Aidy Bryant, Vanessa Bayer and Cecily Strong.

These additions to the Saturday Night Live cast have been some of the strongest in years, so why not reward them with a big-screen blockbuster? If nothing else, I expect some "famous women audition for Ghostbusters III" impressions from these four sometime this season.

The TV grab-bag: Mindy Kaling, Casey Wilson, Teyonah Parris and Sarah Silverman.

Now I'm just playing favourites. What you want in a Ghostbusters team is a mix of strong, distinct personalities who won't drown each other out, and that's what these four have.

Kaling and Wilson are irresistible, and Silverman is always a commanding presence.

And Mad Men co-star Teyonah Parris shows some very impressive comic chops in the upcoming Dear White People and should be on your radar.

'Lies' drive Bynes crazy, so she's suing over and over

If Amanda Bynes' Twitter feed is to be believed, she's ready to strike back at the tabloids that have been having a field day since her re-emergence last week.

"I am suing In Touch for lying about me entirely. They continue to write lies about me and it really hurts my feelings, because they are calling me insane and I'm actually really smart," Bynes writes.

"I finally hired the best lawyer in New York City to sue In Touch magazine because they are utterly insane and lying to the public about me.

"I'm also suing Star magazine for doing the exact same thing," she adds.

"The true definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results. So I'm laughing all the way to the bank because I will sue them all. I will sue anyone in the media who lies about me and says I ever gave them an interview when I never gave literally any magazine a quote."

There is at least one publication she's cool with, though: "I am getting married and my boyfriend and I are going to be on the cover (of) People magazine," Bynes writes.

"Because although they have made up things about me before, they will omit any error they've made."

A girl's got to have standards, after all.

Finding the perfect fit for your feet

Ronsons Shoes places great emphasis on assisting customers

If you are going to be wearing shoes for roughly half your life, they had better be good ones.

"Many people wear the wrong size shoes," says Jessica Niles, manager of Ronsons Shoes flagship store in downtown Vancouver. "They rely on the fact that they've always worn that size without considering how the particular shoes they're trying on actually fit."

The reality is that every foot is different, every brand is different and every style is different.

Vancouver-based Ronsons has 17 stores located across Metro Vancouver and carries shoes of all types for men and women, all of which were designed to look good while providing amazing comfort.

"We place great emphasis on making sure that our customers are comfortable," Niles says.

Ronsons staff members are trained for two weeks on how to correctly measure a foot before they begin assisting customers.

"We always measure both feet," Niles says. "The pair of shoes you purchase should always be large enough to accommodate the larger foot, otherwise it's not going to be happy."

Half-insoles and other support can then be added in the shoe for the smaller foot to make sure it fits nicely.

When you are fitting your shoes it's essential to walk around in them, Niles says.

"The shoe should always bend at the widest part of your foot, otherwise the crease is going to rub your foot and cause pain."

When Ronsons staff are providing assessments for customers they also consider how the individual will be using the shoe. Is it for trail walking or city walking? Will you need to take it through water? Because for shoes to be really comfortable, they not only need to feel good and fit well, but the customer must love them, too

"There are lots of tips we give our customers," Niles says. "For instance, lace-up shoes will always give you a better fit because they're more adjustable, so lace-ups are usually better as walking shoes."

DEDICATED TO THE COMMUNITY

Ronsons Shoes walks the walk. The Vancouver-based footwear company contributes to many community organizations and initiatives.

Every year, the company donates hundreds of pairs of new shoes to Metro Vancouver charities through the Two/Ten Foundation, as well as auction items and gift cards to support local schools, charity events and community events seeking sponsorship.

Sustainability projects are equally important. The company is working to eliminate plastic shopping bags from its stores (its current plastic bags are biodegradable), and also offers reusable shopping bags to customers for $1, which is donated to an environmental cause.

So far, Ronsons has raised $3,000 for the David Suzuki Foundation.

NOTICE THE DIFFERENCE WITH RONSONS SHOES

Hands-on service sets Ronsons Shoes apart from other shoe retailers in Vancouver, says founder Tony Aronson, who started the business with his father 26 years ago when they saw the need in the city for a full-service shoe store.

"Our culture is so strong," he says. "That's why we have so many loyal customers. We are the No. 1 shoe store in most malls we're a part of."

Customers get the best treatment possible because staff are valued and knowledgeable.

"Our staff are our company partners," Aronson says. "Their success is our success and our customers' success. When someone walks away from a Ronsons with that perfect-fitting pair of shoes, everyone wins — even if it's the shoes they arrived in."

When a customer comes in to try on a new pair of shoes, staff may polish the pair they are wearing or check the fit. Maybe the old shoes need new laces, or could be fitted better. Ronsons staff offer their expertise for free, even when they don't make a sale.

"We hope that the moment you walk through our door, you notice the difference," Aronson says. "We are not about the hard sell. We want to know about you, your activities, your preferences and your feet. What we really value is establishing long-term relationships with our customers."

The choices Ronsons offers in-store and online is exceptional. The retailer carries hundreds of styles from trusted quality shoe companies worldwide, including Clarks, Ecco, Rockport, Vionic and many more. Pick up a pair of leather boots for fall, some ballet flats or loafers for the office, some running shoes or trail walking shoes — Ronsons carries footwear for a wide range of activities.

So what does the future hold for Ronsons? More of the same. Just as styles change, so do the needs of its customers. Ronsons' challenge is to ensure that it keeps on providing customers with an optimal shopping experience.

Alternative Thanksgiving Week.

No one at your table likes turkey? Try Orange Roasted Chicken

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

Although a classic Thanksgiving tradition, roasting a whole turkey can be a bit of hassle — especially if you’re not expecting to feed a crowd!

A roasted chicken is a nice alternative. This one feels special and occasion-worthy with orange wedges and a hit of Triple Sec or Grand Marnier.

Add delicious roasted veggies and you’re in for a memorable meal.

Ingredients

Chicken

- 1 lb (454 g) parsnips, peeled and cut in half lengthwise
- 2 onions, sliced
- 3 sprigs fresh sage
- 2 oranges, unpeeled, each cut into 6 wedges
- 1 large chicken, about 5 lb (2.3 kg)
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) Dijon mustard
- Juice of 1 orange
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) Triple Sec or Grand Marnier
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- Salt and pepper

Sauce

- 4 cups (1 litre) chicken broth
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) honey
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) Triple Sec
- 2 tsp cornstarch

Chicken

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 375 F (190 C).

2. In roasting pan, spread parsnips, onions and sage. Season with salt and pepper. Set aside.

3. Insert segments of one orange in chicken’s cavity. Brush chicken with mustard and place over vegetables. Drizzle with orange juice, Triple Sec and olive oil. Season with salt and pepper. Place remaining orange wedges around chicken.

4. Roast 2 hours or until a meat thermometer inserted into the thigh without touching the bone reads 180 F (82 C). Place the chicken and vegetables in a warm serving dish. Skim the fat from the pan drippings and keep drippings for the sauce.

Sauce

1. In saucepan, combine all ingredients and add reserved pan drippings. Bring to boil, stirring with whisk, and reduce by half. Press two cooked orange wedges into sauce. Strain and adjust seasoning. Serve with chicken. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA AND ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE’S ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED IN SEPT!

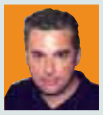
Wines to give turkey the bird



LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Of all the meals you’ll eat this year, Thanksgiving dinner is the most traditional. Or is it? A poll of my friends found that while most will take the turkey and cranberry sauce route, some have given up cliché fare for a less mainstream main.

That bodes well for this week’s recipe. Ricardo flips the bird at turkey and suggests chicken glazed with an orange sauce.

It’s the sauce that dictates your choice of wine. The up-front citrus influence of the orange liqueur will wreak havoc on anything too dry, too full or too oaky.

If you prefer a red, go with a light-bodied pinot noir from California or Chile. When it comes to white, think Riesling from Germany or one from a local vineyard in your province — it’s grown just about everywhere in Canada.

I like Chardonnay. The Banrock Station 2013 Unwooded Chardonnay ($11.99 to $12.99) from Australia sees no barrel aging, and its bright, lime, melon and pineapple flavours will make for a happy holiday no matter what you’re serving. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

From the roots up side dish

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp (45 ml) butter
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) honey
- 4 long thin carrots, peeled and cut into quarters lengthwise
- 4 small parsnips, peeled and cut into quarters lengthwise
- 4 black salsify (optional), peeled and cut half lengthwise
- 2 medium-sized turnips, peeled and cut into 6 pieces
- 1 leek (white part only), cut into 1-inch (2.5 cm) pieces
- 1 onion, chopped OR 12 small pickling onions
- 2 tsp fresh thyme leaves
- Salt and pepper

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 350 F (180 C).

2. In a large ovenproof skillet, heat the butter and honey. Add the vegetables and thyme. Cook over medium-high heat for about 10 minutes, without stirring too much, to allow the vegetables to caramelize. Season with salt and pepper.

3. Place the skillet in the oven and roast for about 40 minutes or until the vegetables are tender. RICARDO

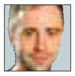
Changed Canucks off to quick start

NHL. Canucks play home opener on Saturday against Oilers



CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

It is just one game. One out of 82. The Vancouver Canucks have barely even started out on the marathon known as the NHL regular season.

But it was as positive a start as a team could hope for, especially after a summer of change in the coaching department, front office and player personnel. The Canucks opened up with a 4-2 win over the host Calgary Flames, not necessarily a powerhouse in the Western Conference.

Willie Desjardins, 57, got the win in his first game as an NHL head coach.

Alex Burrows scored in the first game of the season, on a power play no less. The popular veteran winger had his 2013-14 campaign ravaged by injuries and he scored only five times — his first goal coming on March 12.

Shots, shots, shots

The Canucks outshot the Flames on Wednesday night, 33-25. Vancouver held the advantage in each of the first two periods.

In their official Canucks debuts, Radim Vrbata scored and Ryan Miller was good in goal for the win.

Again, it was one game and it was against the Flames.

The Canucks' home opener is Saturday against the Edmonton Oilers at Rogers Arena.

The Canucks issued a press release Thursday, with a list of 10 things to know for Saturday's game. Sitting No. 2 on the list: Complimentary beverages for all fans upon arrival.

There was an interesting development from practice Thursday, when defenceman Chris Tanev was not on the ice.

Desjardins said Tanev would be evaluated Thursday.

Whitecaps need history to repeat in Seattle

It was exactly one year ago Thursday that the Vancouver Whitecaps went into Seattle, needing a win to keep their playoff hopes alive.

Here we are, 366 days later, and the situation facing the local Major League Soccer club is eerily similar. The Whitecaps are on the road to face the Sounders FC on Friday, needing three points to jump back over the Portland Timbers and into the fifth and final post-season position in the Western Conference.

The Timbers lead the Whitecaps by two points.

Last year, the Whitecaps, even though they didn't make the playoffs, came out of that Seattle meeting with a 4-1 victory to at least remain in the hunt for another game.

The Whitecaps hope that when it comes to a meeting against their Cascadia Cup rivals, history can repeat itself.

It needs to. If not, Vancouver would find itself on the outside of the playoff picture looking in with two games remaining in the regular season after Friday.

The Whitecaps will also be without skilled forward Sebastian Fernandez due to a suspension for yellow card accumulation.

Fernandez scored twice in Vancouver's last victory, but received a yellow card later in the second half and is now banned for one game as a result. CAM TUCKER/METRO

Pens leave Ducks to cook in barn burner

Sidney Crosby celebrates his first goal of the season with Penguins teammate Patrick Hornqvist on Thursday night. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NHL MVP Sidney Crosby scored twice and added an assist as the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Anaheim Ducks 6-4 Thursday night in the season opener for both teams.

Pascal Dupuis added a goal and three assists in his return from knee surgery for the Penguins, who rolled to victory in new coach Mike Johnston's debut. Patrick Hornqvist, Blake Comeau and Brandon Sutter also scored for Pittsburgh. Marc-Andre Fleury made 25 saves.

Corey Perry had a hat trick for the Ducks, who collapsed after erasing an early three-goal deficit. Ryan Kesler added a goal in his debut with Anaheim. John Gibson struggled, stopping 33 of 39 shots.

The Pens underwent a massive overhaul following a fifth straight spring that ended without a trip to the Stanley Cup final. Pittsburgh fired coach Dan Bylsma and general manager Ray Shero and brought in former Carolina Hurricanes executive Jim Rutherford, who hired the well-travelled Johnston and tasked him with making sure Crosby's and Malkin's primes don't go to waste.

The Ducks off-season moves included the acquisitions of Kesler, a two-way forward, centre Nate Thompson, defenceman Clayton Stoner and veteran scorer Dany Heatley. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadiens vs. Capitals

Squeaker win for Montreal

Tomas Plekanec scored his third goal of the young season, and the Montreal Canadiens recovered from a slow start Thursday night for a 2-1 shootout win over the Washington Capitals and new coach Barry Trotz.

Brendan Gallagher scored the decisive goal in the fifth round of the shootout, which, intriguingly, did not feature Capitals star and three-time NHL MVP Alex Ovechkin until the fourth round.

Predators vs. Senators

First win for new Nashville coach

Craig Smith, Shea Weber and Eric Nystrom all scored in the third period, and the Predators beat the Ottawa Senators 3-2 Thursday night, giving coach Peter Laviolette a win in his Nashville debut.

Smith tied it at 1 with his goal 1:36 into the third of the season opener for both teams. Then Weber, the three-time Norris Trophy finalist, skated around the net before flipping a backhander over a diving Craig Anderson for the lead. Nystrom scored at 10:20.

MLB playoffs. Speedy Royals take on brawny Orioles for American League championship

Billy Butler of the Royals slides safely into second base against Erick Aybar of the Los Angeles Angels during Game 3 of the ALDS at Kauffman Stadium in Kansas City. ED ZURGA/GETTY IMAGES

Speed versus Power.

The surprising Kansas City Royals and unflappable Baltimore Orioles are extremely similar with one significant exception: the fashion in which they score runs. The team that best utilizes its standard method of offence will likely win the best-of-seven AL Championship Series, which begins Friday night.

Get ready for small ball versus long ball.

Back in April, few could have predicted these two teams would be the last standing in the American League. But the fashion in which they got here — with stunningly easy sweeps in the Division Series — makes this matchup intriguing.

Even more interesting is their contrasting styles.

The Royals love to take an extra base, whether it's turning a single into a double or stealing their way into scoring position. Kansas City led the majors with 153 stolen bases during the regular season then, with blazing-fast rookie Terrance Gore, added seven in a wild-card win over Oakland and five more in a three-game wipeout of the top-seeded Los Angeles Angels.

"Speed. That's what we do," designated hitter Billy Butler said. "Obviously you have to be smart about it, but we're a very aggressive team. When our speed guys get on they like to go. That's what got us to this point — that, and pitching and defence."

Although Baltimore finished dead last in the majors with 44 stolen bases, it led the majors with 211 home runs. Nelson Cruz had 40 of them, only 55 fewer than the Royals hit while finishing last in the big leagues as the only team that didn't hit 100.

And so, the lines are drawn. Whichever pitching staff can stifle the opposition's preferred method of offence will likely be working in the World Series.

Prosecutors want Peterson's bond revoked for weed

Minnesota Vikings star Adrian Peterson should be arrested anew after admitting during his court appearance on a child abuse charge that he had "smoked a little weed" while out on bond, Texas prosecutors said Thursday.

In a court motion, the Montgomery County District Attorney's Office said Peterson allegedly told a worker conducting his urinalysis exam during a Wednesday court appearance that he had smoked marijuana.

Peterson is currently free on a $15,000 bond after he was indicted last month on a felony charge of injury to a child for using a wooden switch to discipline his four-year-old son.

Indy takes Texas

Andrew Luck and the Indianapolis Colts had a great first quarter and did just enough the rest of the way to hold on for a 33-28 victory over the Houston Texans on Thursday night.

The Colts (4-2) raced to a 24-0 lead after one quarter, but allowed Houston to cut it to 33-28 early in the fourth quarter on J.J. Watt's fumble return for a touchdown.

You have been experiencing a lot of emotional ups and downs of late and need to find a balance between being concerned about personal issues and laughing at them.
